

Chelsea Brown
November 15, 2008
EDU5571

What is Social Capital?

Social Capital is the merging of social networks sensitive to the notion of tolerance and diversity, community/group norms, and value system/values using trust, cooperation and information sharing, in an effort to bring improvements to a problem/obstacle. The improvement comes in the form of providing resources and support as the group works its way toward a solution. Connecting people with others in ways that are beneficial for the individual and the community by bonding/linking and bridging (networks) allows for sustainable movement toward a common purpose.